

Maintaining Strong Social Ties

Studies show low levels of social interaction can be as dangerous as smoking 15 cigarettes a day and can be TWICE as harmful as obesity.

Social isolation can also lead to conditions such as depression and dementia, and it is a serious threat to the overall health of older adults. Some factors that can increase the risk of becoming socially isolated include living alone, speaking a language other than English, and/or belonging to a minority group, according to the AARP Foundation. On the positive front: maintaining social ties can improve the odds of survival by 50%. Social isolation has become a prominent and pressing issue for our aging population and a shared concern of many health care providers and community organizations, including Keiro. In this issue, we feature organizations that are keeping people tied to their community.

Keiro Connecting with the Community...

Welcome to Keiro Connect: Spring 2018 Edition!

As temperatures outside slowly rise and our Southern California winter draws to a close, thoughts turn to planting calendars, baseball season openers, and warm weather pursuits. But before flipping the calendar to April, I want to share a glance at snapshots from the start of 2018, showing how some integrate older adults into activities shared with younger generations.

Shinnenkai signifies a special time of year, when we reconnect to celebrate the New Year, honor traditions, and recognize our senior community members. At the events hosted by the Venice Japanese Community Center, Seinan Senior Citizens' Club, and the Japanese Community Pioneer Center, among others, it was heartening to see our older adults celebrating and being celebrated, dining among hundreds, thrilling to raffle drawings, and enjoying performances.

At Keiro, we realize not every day is a party. But every day should bring ways for older adults to stay active and engaged, as they do at these wonderful community celebrations. This edition features some ways Keiro is striving to expand these opportunities. And we thank the individuals and community partners who continue to help us serve our older adults. Happy Spring!

President and Chief Executive Officer, Keiro

暖冬が終わりをつげ、ここ南カリフォルニアでも春の訪れを感じるこの季節。日系パイオニアセンター様はじめロサンゼルス各地で行われた多くの新年会に参加させていただきましたが、特に元気で健康な人生の先輩方が、賞品が当たるかもしれない抽選チケットを片手に和気藹々と過ごされている姿がとてもほえましく強く印象に残りました。

高齢者の方及びコミュニティ全体が集うイベントも含め、いかに高齢者の方に元気で生き生きとした毎日を送っていただける

かをKeiroは考えながら活動しております。本号ではその取り組みを少しご紹介させていただきます。また、高齢者の生活の質の向上というミッションに貢献して下さるコミュニティパートナーそしてボランティアの皆様へ深く感謝申し上げます。

Go For Broke National Education Center

Navigating Southern California freeways and construction zones can prove to be a daunting task for many. As an older adult, undertaking this task to meet up with friends or participate in an event presents an overwhelming and intimidating barrier. As they age, they may decide to avoid the risks and stay at home, gradually becoming more isolated and disconnected from their social circles. According to the AARP Foundation, a lack of reliable transportation is one risk factor that contributes to social isolation. Go For Broke National Education Center is one among many of Keiro's Grants Program recipients that are combatting social isolation. Through the grant, they can now provide a van service for these honorable veterans and their families to participate regularly in programs and events, socializing with others who understand and have shared history and experiences.

East San Gabriel Valley Japanese Community Center

Alongside their twice-a-week Senior Wellness Program supported by Keiro's grants program to keep older adults active through different social and exercise activities, East San Gabriel Valley Japanese Community Center teaches older adults how to communicate with their children and grandchildren using the latest technology such as FaceTime, text messaging, and email. They may not be together in person with their family, but they can maintain strong social ties with their loved ones.

Little Tokyo Nutrition Services

Little Tokyo Nutrition Services provides nutritious Japanese lunch every weekday to the residents of Little Tokyo Towers as well as homebound older adults living in the area. With declining governmental funding for similar nutrition programs, the Keiro grant provides vital support for the program's operational costs. Providing a place to gather as well as having regular visitors delivering food helps older adults living in urban areas stay connected with their local communities.
