Presentations

Overview of Alzheimer's and Related Disorders

Presented by Dr. Joshua Chodosh, MSHS, FACP, Geriatrician and Professor, Departments of Medicine and Population Health, NYU Langone Health

Dr. Chodosh will present an overview of Alzheimer's and related disorders, explaining how these conditions differ from normal cognitive changes that occur with aging. He will share the benefits of early detection and diagnosis and the components of high-quality care.

Alzheimer's Disease Research Update: What is the Weather Forecast?

Presented by Dr. Helena Chang Chui, Chair and Professor of Neurology, Raymond and Betty McCarron Chair in Neurology, Director of the USC Alzheimer's Research Program

The Silver Tsunami continues, and it is said that by 2050, the number of people with Alzheimer's will triple. Dr. Chui will share the latest research on early detection and disease-modifying treatment.

Hopeful Signs for the Future – Resources We Have Access to

Presented by Sarah Lenz Lock, JD, Senior Vice President for Policy, AARP; Executive Director, Global Council on Brain Health; and Dr. Debra Cherry, Executive Vice President, Alzheimer's Los Angeles

Learn about new insights from the Global Council on Brain Health that we can all use to reduce risks and improve quality of life. This session will discuss the six pillars of brain health to more effectively manage dementia, along with valuable community resources available through Alzheimer's Los Angeles.
